The Company shall have the right to verify the continued existence of such permanent and total disability at reasonable times prior to the Pensioner's attaining age sixty-five (65) years, and should the Pensioner refuse to submit at the request of the Company to examination by such qualified physician selected by the Company, his pension shall be discontinued until he submits to such examination. No break in service shall result from absence while in receipt of a disability pension.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, should the permanent and total disability cease after normal retirement date, the disability pension shall continue for the life of the Member.

In lieu of such deferred pension at age sixty-two (62) years, an Employee who retires prior to attaining age sixty-two (62) years may elect to have a smaller immediate pension to commence on the first day of the month next following the month in which his early retirement occurred, in which event the amount of such immediate pension shall be the amount of such deferred pension at age sixty-two (62) years reduced by the percentage obtained by multiplying 0.5% by the number of complete calendar months between the date of retirement and the Employee's sixty-second (62nd) birthday, provided, however, that such reduction shall not apply in the case of an Employee who has thirty (30) or more years of Qualification Service. In the event a Supplemental Pension becomes payable to an Employee who has not attained age sixty (60), the Supplemental Pension shall not exceed an amount equal to the sum of (i) the total of such actual or estimated Canada Pension Plan and Old Age Security benefits multiplied by the ratio of the Employee's Credited Service before January 1, 1992 to his total Credited Service, and (ii) the total of such actual or estimated Canada Pension Plan and Old Age Security benefits multiplied by the ratio of the Employee's Credited Service on and after January 1, 1992 to his total Credited Service reduced by 1/4 of 1% for each month between the date of retirement and the date on which the Employee's sixtieth (60th) birthday will occur.

Provided further that in no event shall the Supplemental Pension payable under subparagraph (a)(2) of this paragraph 1 exceed the total actual or estimated amount of Canada Pension Plan and Old Age Security benefits which the Employee would receive if he were age sixty-five (65) on the date of pension commencement. In lieu of such deferred life annuity, a former Employee who has attained age fifty-five (55) years but has not attained age sixty-five (65) years may elect to have a smaller immediate life annuity to commence on the first day of any month before he attains age sixty-five (65) years in which event such immediate life annuity shall be such deferred life annuity reduced by the percentage obtained by multiplying 0.5% by the number of complete calendar months between the date of commencement of such immediate life annuity and such former Employee's sixty-fifth (65) birthday.

The former Spouse's interest in the benefits of the Employee, former Employee or Pensioner, as applicable, shall be transferred or paid only as permitted under the Pension Benefits Act and the Income Tax Act, and, if applicable, benefits subsequently payable from the Plan on and after the Employee’s retirement, termination or death, shall be adjusted to take into account the amounts transferred or paid to the Employee’s former Spouse.

   (ii) For greater certainty, where an Employee, former Employee or Pensioner and a former Spouse of the Employee, former Employee or Pensioner, as applicable, divide the benefits of the Employee, former Employee and Pensioner under the Plan on marriage breakdown in accordance with an order under Part I of the Family Law Act (Ontario), a family arbitration award or a written domestic contract (as defined in the Family Law Act (Ontario)) to which section 67.5 of the Pension Benefits Act applies, the Employee, former Employee or Pensioner and/or the former Spouse must first provide a completed application, in the prescribed form, and payment of the applicable fee, following which, the Company shall issue to the Employee, former Employee or Pensioner, as applicable, and the former Spouse a statement of imputed value, in the prescribed form, in accordance with the Pension Benefits Act and applicable regulatory policies and the former Spouse may apply for a transfer or division of benefits, in the prescribed form, following receipt of the statement of imputed value.

(iv) Notwithstanding Section IV, a former Spouse who is entitled to a Joint and Survivorship Pension upon the death of the Pensioner under Section IV and who is entitled to a division of the Pensioner’s benefits under paragraph (ii) above or is entitled to a division of family property as a result of a marriage breakdown from the Pensioner, may waive the entitlement to the Joint and Survivorship Pension in the prescribed form.

(b) Such Employee may elect either:

(i) to recommence accruing Credited Service as of the date on which he completes two (2) years of Continuous Service in which event his pension from the Plan shall be suspended until his employment is again terminated. Upon such subsequent termination of employment, the Employee's pension will, subject to the requirements of the Income Tax Act, be re-computed to allow for any additional benefits that may have accrued during such period of re-employment; or

(ii) not to accrue further Credited Service; in which event he shall continue to receive his pension from the Plan.

(c) Notwithstanding paragraph (b) above, if such re-employed Employee had been in receipt of a pension from the Plan at any time while employed by a Participating Employer, he shall continue to receive his pension and shall not accrue further benefits under the Plan during the period of re-employment.
